'Lowe'n Star State: New '9-1-1' spinoff takes on Texas

By Breanna Henry
TV Media

The first-responder series "9-1-1" is currently Fox's highest-rated drama, so it stands to reason that it should get its own spinoff. Set in Austin, Texas, "9-1-1: Lone Star" has all the makings of a majorly successful second installment: a talented, high-profile cast, fantastic source material, eye-catching artistic direction and a compelling jumping-off point for the storyline. The brand-new series premieres Sunday, Jan. 19, on Fox.

"Lone Star" is centered around a character named Owen Strand, who is played by former Brat Packer Rob Lowe ("Code Black"). You can think of him as a variation of "9-1-1's" Bobby Nash (Peter Krause), only shorter, a little older and with a more chiselled jawline. Nearly 20 years before "9-1-1: Lone Star" opens, Owen worked as a firefighter in Manhattan during the harrowing events of 9/11, which took the lives of every member of his firehouse but him. The lone survivor, he spent the next decade rebuilding his team from the ground up, and this unenviable entry on Capt. Owen Strand's resume makes him uniquely qualified for a job in Texas at Firehouse 126.

Tragically, the 126 received a rescue call, and much like Strand's Manhattan team, the result was the devastating loss of all of the responders but one. The parallel tragedies set the stage for "9-1-1: Lone Star," and act as the catalyst for Strand's move from the Big Apple to the Lone Star State.

There is a stereotype about close-knit teams of first responders, specifically police and firefighters: they don't like outsiders. This is true in "9-1-1: Lone Star," too, as Owen Strand is met with a prickly chief paramedic Michelle Watts (Liv Tyler, "Harlots") and Firehouse 126's sole survivor, Judd Ryder (Jim Parrack, "The Deuce"). Watts is a genius and Judd is a cowboy, but both of them seem to agree that the aforementioned stereotype holds true.

The cast is rounded out by Strand's troubled son, T.K. (Ronen Rubenstein, "Dead of Summer"), officer Carlos Reyes (Rafael Silva, "Fluidity" 2019) and the captain's hand-picked team of firefighters. The "Fine ... but I get to pick my team" trope is a classic part of a modern hero's journey, and Owen uses it well, selecting devout Muslim Marjan Marwani (Natacha Karam, "The Brave"), the adrenaline junkie, Paul Strickland (Brian Michael Smith, "The L Word: Generation Q"), a transgender firefighter with enough brains for the whole house, and Mateo Chavez (Julian Works, "American Crime"), who has no known qualities yet, because no team is complete without someone everyone else can call "rookie."

Setting the series in Austin, and Texas in general, creates room for some distinctly southern emergencies that would seem out of place in Los Angeles, where the parent series is set. The show's trailer includes a rampaging rodeo bull, for example. Another small blessing "9-1-1: Lone Star" appears to be offering viewers is a lack of terrible Texas accents. In fact, the only team member (so far) who is meant to be from Texas is actually played by an actor from Texas (Parrack). Though the cast hails from all over — from Michigan to Rehovot, Israel — the series is set up so that the main character's diction and dialogue won't leave you needing to suspend your disbelief when you hear a New Yorker like Tyler attempting a natural "y'all."

Part of what makes the 9-1-1 series special is the way it seamlessly weaves comedy into a drama that, on the surface, has absolutely no business being light and funny. However, everyone who knows (or is) a police officer, firefighter, paramedic, nurse or any one of the real-life superhero professions knows that this kind of work has two hidden requirements: an iron stomach and a pitch-black sense of humor.

These people risk their lives for strangers on a daily basis, often exhausting and sometimes traumatizing themselves for the sake of people they don't even know. If they want to pretend to hit a hole-in-one with a recently amputated leg, then I say swing away (that particular story comes from my aunt, a psychiatric ER nurse who chuckled along with the paramedics when that quirky event played out). A bit of humor goes a long way towards keeping the terrors at bay, and fun comraderie on the job can keep a first responder sane.

In a sneak peek of the upcoming series, Lowe said, "To bring to life these characters, who are based on people who are actually out in the trenches saving lives every single day, is a profound honor for me." You can catch Lowe and the rest of the "9-1-1: Lone Star" cast in the series premiere, which airs on Sunday, Jan. 19, on Fox. So far, everything points to the success of this new offering, and the first episode is sure to leave y'all commin' back now, y'hear?

Dragon Ball Super

TOON 8:30 pm

Go back to where it all began in this episode, as the Kais try hiding the existence of Beerus, the God of Destruction, from Goku. Meanwhile on a yacht, Bulma plans a birthday party her husband might actually show up for.

48 Hours

WBTW 10:00 pm

Correspondents Erin Moriarty and Peter Van Sant investigate shocking true-crime and real-life drama in this news magazine. Since premiering in 1988, the program has helped to exonerate wrongly convicted people, and led to the re-opening of cold cases.

"48 Hours" correspondent Erin Moriarty

NFC Championship

WFXB 6:30 pm

Find out who is going to the Superbowl this year as one team is decided in this NFC Championship game. It's been a tight race between the New Orleans Saints, the San Francisco 49ers, the Green Bay Packers and the Seattle Seahawks, but it's anyone's game.

America's Got Talent: The Champions

WRAL WMBF 7:00 pm

Relive the most memorable acts from previous seasons as 10 amazing competitors from all over the world perform for judges Simon Cowell, Alesha Dixon, Heidi Klum and Howie Mandel in a rebroadcast of this talent-search series.

Flirty Dancing

WFXB 8:00 pm

In this new reality series, two strangers are challenged to separately learn a dance routine before arriving at an undisclosed, romantic location where they meet for the first time while performing the dance together.

Chicago Fire

WRAL WMBF 9:00 pm

Kidd (Miranda Rae Mayo) tries to think of how she can surprise Severide (Taylor Kinney) for his birthday in this new episode. Meanwhile, the firehouse struggles to respond to actual emergency calls when a private school has a series of false alarms.

"S.W.A.T." star Shemar Moore

Single Parents

WTVD WPDE 9:30 pm

Will Cooper (Taran Killam) has been so focused on raising his 7-year-old daughter that he's all but lost his identity in this comedy. Luckily, a group of fellow single parents band together to remind him that being a parent doesn't mean losing yourself.

S.W.A.T.

WBTW 10:00 pm

To help his foster brother Nate (Cory Hardict) escape a drug ring, Street (Alex Russell) puts his life on the line in this new episode. Hondo (Shemar Moore) and the rest of the team rally together to have his back.
